While the internet promises many benefits to children, it can also be the most dangerous place for them. The issue remains to be an alarming global concern, with millions of children having experienced being forced to perform sexual acts online, or being blackmailed for sexual purposes. Hundreds of millions of child sexual abuse materials are also shared and traded on the internet. In the Philippines, 1 in 2 children is a victim of violence on the internet, according to a government study. The worst form of this violence is online sexual abuse and exploitation.
